Her yellow hair fell to her waist, her face was like a blush rose, and her eyes were blue as forget-me-nots, but when she lifted them, he saw that they were clear and hard as glass, and her voice when she spoke was like a bright cold bell. There ran up to her a little serving-maid, crying bitterly, and said, I beg of you, Princess, to let me return to my own home for a time, for my father, the huntsman, has broken his leg and is very ill. Why should you cry for that said the Princess. Tis your father and not you that is hurt; but you may go, for when you cry and your eyes look red you are ugly, and I dont like to see you, so be sure that when you return you are pretty and bright as ever. When her ladies heard her they looked angry, but no one spoke, and the little maid went crying away. Pg 91 Up there came a groom from the palace...
