Clark, facsimile 355 LETTERS OF EMILY DICKINSON CHAPTER VI To the Misses AMONG the most natural and spontaneous of Emily Dickinsons letters are these to her cousins. They are, perhaps, more than usually full of her real self, or one unmistakable phase of that elusive individuality. Many, indeed, are so completely personal that they are of necessity omitted, and the final letter has been reserved for the closing chapter. January, 1859. Since it snows this morning, dear L , too fast for interruption, put your brown curls in a basket, and come and sit with me. I am sewing for Vinnie, and Vinnie is flying through the flakes to buy herself a little hood. Its quite a fairy morning, and I often lay down my needle, and build a castle in the air which seriously impedes the sewing project. What if I pause a little longer, and write a note to you! Who will be the wiser I have known little of you, since the October morning when our families went out driving, and you and I in the dining-room decided to be distinguished. Its a great thing to be great, L , and you and I might tug for a life, and never accomplish it, but no...
